Edward Reinhardt was hanged yesterday, in the yard attached to the Rehmond County Jail, for the murder of his wife, in July, 1878. He made no confession of his guilt.

He walked coolly to the gallows, and at no time showed any signs of weakness. The tentending clergyman occupied four minutes in religious exercises while the condemned man stood under the gallows in the falling rain.

The hanging was witnessed by a large number of persons.

Vaushan and Hodges, and Police Officers Fitzpatrick and Clatims, were seated. He was in his shirt sleeves and pleasantly sainted the attendants. In front of his cell there is a large stove, which heats one side of the prison, and close to the door of the cell was a table on which a kerosone hamp burned dimly. The prisoner walked to the stove, and lighting a cigar, said: "Gentlemen, I'm going to take a smoke." He sat down in a large arm-enair which was close to the stove and opened a conversation with the attendants, which continued, almost without interruption, until 5 a.m. Among other things Reinhardt said: "There is no mercy for me this side of the grave and I have known it for some time. I will now wait and see what mercy I will receive on the other side. I never expected mercy from Governor Cornell, for his conduct in the cases of Cox and poor Balbo showed me that he was not in favor of saving a condemned man's life."

At 7 seven o'clock Reinhardt said that he would a server of the case of the grave and I have the ordered equal in partition.

At 7 seven o'clock Reinhardt said that he would eat breakfast. He ordered quail, partridge, two pieces of toast and a pot of coflee, when he at ewith apparent relish. The Rev. Mr. Brinckerhoff, the Haptist minister whom Reinhardt invited to be present when he was hanged, arrived about 7. He went into the prisoner's cell and remained with him alone for nearly three hours. By this time a few persons began to arrive at the outside of the jail. An hour later sleighs were seen on the road going to the jail from every direction, and at 9 o'clock, the hour at which it was thought Reinhardt would be hanged, the road in front of the prison was blocked with vehicles of every description, which had brought residents from all parts of the island. Many persons had walked in the pouring rain and to seek shelter they were compelled to go. o the bar-roem of the hottel. The proprietor of that place did a thriving business. All the rooms in the hotel were engaged a week ago. Very little provision was made for keeping from the lail-yard those who had not been appointed special deputy-sheriffs. Sheriff Conner was hasily engaged, and whoever he left in charge of the door neglected the important duty of keeping out the crowd. About 100 deputies were appointed, but fully as many more persons gained entrance into the yard without passes. Around the fence of the jail hundreds of people were collected, and remained there despite the rain.

After the minister had been in the cell nearly three hours he announced to the Sheriff, who had grown impatient at the minister's long service, that the prisoner aspeared less disturbed than those around him. When the hangman took the rope out of his pocket, with which the condemned man's arms were to be pinioned, Reinhardt rose quickly from his cot and stood in front of him. After his arms had been secured the rope was placed around the prison he stepped into the corridor, where a number of the deputies had gathered, his face became flushed and he drew a long breath, as if preparing to battle with his nerves if he should be overcome. He walked with a firm step and his strides were so long and rapid that Sheriff Conner, who held his left hand, could hardly keep bace with him.

It was exactly 10 o'clock when Reinhardt reached the gallows. He turned his back to the crowd and let his eyes fall to the ground. The rain was falling heavily, and in a few seconds his shoulders were wet. He was dressed in striped trousers and waistcoat and a black frockcoat. He wore a white shirt with standing collar, around which was a blue tie with white spots. As soon as the rope on his neck was fastened to the one suspended from the gallows the Rev. Mr. Brinckerhoff opened a pocket Bible and began to read a chapter. The delay was tedious. The minister read for about two minutes and Reinhardt stood calmiy, with his eyes cast down, and showed not the slightest sign of emotion. When the minister finished reading he began a the Rev. Mr. Brinckerhoff opened a pocket Bible and began to read a chapter. The delay was tedious. The ministor read for about two minutes and Reinhardt stood calmiy, with his eyes cast down, and showed not the slightest sign of emotion. When the minister finished reading he began a prayer, which lasted two minutes longer; but the condemned man stood as unmoved as ever. At one part in the prayer the minister said; "O. Lord, I acknowledge my transgression," when Reinhardt raised his head and looked in the minister's face as if to question what he was saying. When the black cap was pulled over Reinhardt's face the minister grasped him by the right hand and said a few farewell words. Dr. Clarke, the prison physician, and Beriff Conner took Reinhardt by the hand, and the prisoner gave each of them a firm grip.

The rope was cut at 10:04, and the body rose four feet. Instantly the dying man's bands twitched as if he were trying to grasp something, and then they were raised to his breast. Several slight convulsions followed; the right leg gave a sudden twitch and then the body hung motionless, except that it swung half round. Twelve minutes after the rope was cut the pulse stopped. At 10:271-2 Doctors Henry King, Ephraim Clarke and Lasac Lea pronounced Reinhardt dead. Michael Oates, a large, stoulty-built man, an undertaker, fainted, and was carried from the yard. The body was placed on a mattress and carried into the hall. The neck was found to have been dislocated and the Coroner's jury reduced a verdict accordingly. The murdered woman's mother and brother were present in the jail when Reinhardt was hunged. The body was placed on a mattress and carried into the hall. THE DEATH OF AN OLD STREET-SWEEPER. PELLY ROONRY CHARGED WITH KILLING HIS PATHER CCUSED BY HIS OWN FAMILY.

Thomas Receipt, an old street-sweeper long employed by the city, was found dead in his room at Ko. 407 West Thirty-ninth-st., on Christmas Day. His throat was cut and everything indicated that he had committed suicide, and so the Coroner's jury found. The police had their suspicions in the matter, but developments were hastened Thursday evening when Joseph and Matthew Rooney, sons of the dead man, and Matthew's wife Margaret went to Coroner Brady and informed him of their belief that Kooney had been murdered by his son Felix, an excurvict. The Coroner promptly ordered the arrest of all the members of the family and with the exception of the alleged nurderer, they were all, seven in number, lodged in the Thirty-seventh-st. Police station before midnight. Yesterday they were examined at the Coroner's office.

Edward Cowley, who was sentenced February 22,1880, to one year's imprisonment in the penitentiary and to pay a fine of $250 for cruelty to the children under his charge in the Snepherd's Fold, and he offered to offset the fine unit paid. Efforts were made by his friends to get the District-Attorney was then asked not to oppose a motion before the Recorder to have the fine remitted, but they failed to interfere, but he also refused. Under the law the fine imposed goes to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, which made the complaint. Mr. Cowley said that he objected to paying the fine because it would nure to the benefit of the society. He claimed that the city owed him for caring for the children in the Shepherd's Fold, and he offered to offset the fine with his claim against the city; but that offer was rejected.

A draft on the Chemical Bank for the amount was then placed in the hands of Warden Fox and Mr. Cowley was released from the Psottentiary January 10. He lost no time in leaving the Island—the former scene of his clerical labors—and is said to be now preparing for a lecturing tour. Before starting on that speculation, however, he will probably have to undergo the ordeal of an ecclesiastical trial. It is understood that Bishop Potter will immediately appoint a Commission to try Mr. Cowley, and he will probably be deposed from the ministry. ## FAITH WITHOUT WORK.

Michael Loughran, a well-dressed and robust man of forty-live years, walked very letsurely to the bar of the Jefferson Market Police Court yesterday, when called on to answer why he should not support his wife and his three children. Mrs. Loughran, who is very delicate, said to the Justice: "Your Honor, I have been married to this man for ten years, and during all that time I have supported him by hard work. I have three small children and find it difficult to get along. I can do nothing with him, Judge. He does nothing but pray."

"That's true, your Honor," said Loughran. "I pray six hours ont of the twenty-four."

"Your prayers alone will not bring bread to your wife and children, said the Justice.

"What does that matter is said the prisoner. "We do not live by bread alone."

"And you think it right to lie about the house, let your wife work for you and your children, and you depend on the Lord for support?"

"Of course," said Loughran; "and if you would pray a little it might do you good."

"How long since you have worked?" asked the limitee.

"I don't know; it is so long ago I forget."

"I will commit you for medical examination."
said the Justice. "If you were put in charge of some one who would take no nonsense and administer a little firm treatment, I think it would do you good and very likely speedily cure you."

RESTRICTED MINING OF COAL.

RESTRICTED MINING OF COAL.

It was reported yesterday that the coal companies would resume next week the mining of coal on full time. An officer of a leading company said that such a proposition had been made because the production had been reduced unexpectedly by the severe weather, but that objection had been made by some of the companies, and that the present restriction to half-time had not yet been changed. It was said that the ground of objections to the proposal was the fact that some of the dealers were selling on al below schedule rates.

POLLUTION OF NEWARK'S WATER. For some time the aqueduct water of Newark has been strongly impregnated with the odor and taste of carbolic acid. A similar condition of the water existed last summer during a season of drouth, and the complaint became so general that a committee of the Newark Aqueduct Board investigated the causes of the pointion of the water. It was ascertained that the immediate cause of the trouble water the washing from the carbolic paper manufactured at the mills of Joseph & Richard Kingsland, structed on an arm of the river. The mill-owners promised to have their paper washed by some process that would not touch the river water. A fortnight ago the carbolic taste reappeared. It was then decided to take the matter before the Grand Jury found an indictment against Joseph and Richard Kingsland, proprietors of the carbolic paper mills.

REACHING PORT IN DISTRESS.

REACHING PORT IN DISTRESS.

The bark Sestri arrived in this port yesterday in distress. She sailed from Philadelphia for Queenstown January 7, and was towed down the Delaware River, astern of another vessel, by an ice-boat. The river was almost impassable owing to ice. At one point the ice-boat rau into a huge cake of ice and vas obliged to stop the engines. The vessels in tow were unable to check their headway, and to avoid collision with the leading vessel the Sestri sheered off and ran into the ice with considerable force. She proceeded to sea and encountered a severe gale after being out a short time. A serious leak was discovered, which made it necessary to come into port for repairs.

The steamship Devon, from Bristol, reports having encountered a heavy southwest gale January 10. An unusually heavy sea broke over the bows, and threw several of the watch with great force to the deck. The boatswain and three sailors were severely injured.

The first and third mates and four of the crew of the British ship Star of India were brought to this port yesterday by the schooner Robert Mason, naving been picked up in an open boat in the ice off Cape Henlopen. Third Officer Haney states that the boat was sent ashore by the captam of the Star of India to receive the vesse's orders at the lower light of Delaware Breakwater. The boat's crew succeeded in getting within a half mile of the shore when the ice impeded their progress. They found it impossible to land, and put about, intending to regain the ship. The wind was against them and their progress was slow. When about half way back an immense field of ice came floating down and hemmed them in. They were dritted out to sea about two miles, and remained in a helpless condition five hours, being becumbed by the cold, with the row-locks of their boat broken.

GEN. GRANT ACCEPTS THE PRESIDENCY. HE IS VISITED BY THE COMMITTEE ON PERMANENT ORGANIZATION-CONDITIONS ON WHICH HE AS-SUMES THE POSITION-JOINT MEETING OF THE EXECUTIVE AND FINANCE COMMITTEES.

EXECUTIVE AND FINANCE COMMITTEES.

The World's Fair Committee on Permanent Organization called on General Grant yesterday morning at a quarier before 10 o'clock and fornally tendered him the presidency of the Commission, which he accepted. All the members of the committee, with the exception of Algermon S. Sullivan, who was out of town, were present. The committee met in the reading-room of the Fifth Avenne Hotel, and accompanied by Governor Crawford, of Kansas, Professor Smart, of Indiana, and Colonel Akers, of Tennessee, all of whom are members of the Commission, ascended to the General's parlors on the second floor. In the room with the ex-President were Mrs. Grant and Edwards Pierrepont. W. A. Cole acted as spokesman of the committee and said:
"As one of the Committee on Perman ent Organization of the United States International Commission, I wish to report to you that you were yesterday unanimously elected president of the Commission."

General Grant replied:

soon."

General Grant replied:

"I had already signified to some of your committee before this that, with the understanding I had of your arrangements, I would accept the position. I may not at first be able to devote all the time I should like to it; but later on, when my presence may be necessary, I shall. I believe you are required to have a certain amount of money before you can go on; is it not so?"

Mr. Cole—Yes, and the Financial Committee will certainly have it.
General Grant—Is it one million or three?

Mr. Cole—One; but the committee has decided to raise four, and we anticipate no trouble now.

General Grant—Until that is done there will be no formal meeting of the Commission?

Mr. Cole—No, sir.
General Grant—Then I will accept the position.

Mr. Cole then thanked General Grant for accepting, and expressed his belief that the General's name would be of assistance to the committee. He stated that the Finance Commit, would meet in the afternoon and also next Thesday, and that the members would be glad to have General Grant present. General Grant said, however, that he would be in Aibany. There was then some talk of postponing the meeting, but it was decided not to do so.

A meeting of the Executive and Finance Commit-

A resolution was offered by Mr. Hames that the secretary be requested to furnish a list of expenses incurred since the committee had entered into occupation of its present rooms up to January 13, and that they be liquidated. The resolution was adopted.

into occupation of its present rooms up to January 13, and that they be liquidated. The resolution was adopted.

It was then moved that the permanent officers of the Executive Committee consist, in addition to the secretary, who is provided for in the Congressional act, of a chairman and vice-chairman. The motion was carried. H. G. Siebbins was elected chairman by acclamation. Messis, Haines, Talcott and Cole were nominated for vice-chairman, and Mr. Cole was elected on the first ballot. He begged leave to resign, but no one was willing to accept his position. He then said that his resignation would be placed in the hands of the chairman, to be filled at any time by any one who would accept the place. The chairman was then called upon to appoint the Committee on By-Laws in accordance with the motion previously passed, and named Messirs. Crawford, Algernon S. Sullivan and McElrath.

A resolution by Mr. Adams, read on Tuesday, to draw up a memorial for Congress requesting that body to admit foreign goods free of duties was referred to the Committee on National Legislation. Mr. Crawford objected that no such committee was yet in existence. It was then moved and carried that the chairman should appoint a committee was yet in existence. It was then moved and carried that the chairman should appoint a committee of three with Algernon S. Sallivan as chairman. A resolution that a committee should be appointed to draw up a programme of opening exercises in accordance with Section 6 of the Congressional act in regard to the Commission was referred to the Committee on National Legislation. The chairman was requested to name the other two members of that committee in order that it might proceed at once with its duties. He appointed S. A. Haines and F. L. Talcott. It was then resolved that the committee meeting. The committee that adjourned, the members of the Finance Committee remained a few moments and decided that they would meet to-day at 3:30 o'clock. at 3:30 o'clock.

HONORS TO GENERAL GRANT.

HE IS GIVEN AN ADDRESS OF WELCOME AT GATHERING OF COLORED PEOPLE.

A concert of vocal and instrumental music was given last night at Steinway Hall in aid of St. Philip's Protestant Episcopal Church. The principal feature of the evening was the presence of General Grant, and an address delivered to him under the auspices of the Colored Citizens' Association of New-York and Brooklyn. Just before the last selection in the concert programme was sang, the arches New-York and Brooklyn. Just before the last selection in the concert programme was sing, the orchestra played Gilmore's "Columbia," and General Grant, escorted by the Rev. J. S. Atwell, pastor of St. Philip's, and accompanied by Edwards Pierrepont, John Jay, Thomas C. Acton and Edward F. Brown, appeared upon the platform. He was received with great enthusiasm, the large assemblage of colored people cheering and waving handkerchiefa Mr. Atweli, after the General had taken his seat said:

seat, said:

In behalf of the church which I represent and of the chizens through whose kindness we secured your presence. I heartily welcome you here. I am pleased to introduce the speaker of the evening, John Quincy Allen, of Brooklyn.

Mr. Allen said in substance:

Mr. Allen said in substance:
GENERAL GRANT: It has been allotted to me to welcome you and to address you on behalf of the colored ettiens of New-York and Brooklyn. While the honored of the earth applauds your deeds, it is meet that colored Americans, for whofe sake you have worked, should tender you the expression of their gratitude. It was for the heroes of old in the age of fable, to perform the deeds celebrated in classic verse. It was for you, the hero of the maeteenth century, to perform, in the age of fact, exploits in the cause of liberty and free government.

The greeker then gave a review of General Grant's

The speaker then gave a review of General Grant's deeds in behalf of the colored race. His remarks were greeted with hearty applause. General Grant were greeted with hearty applause. General Grant said in reply:

Mr. Speaker and Fellow-Citizens: I thank you and this andience for the address of welcome and the heartiness with which you have received me. I assure you f appreciate it mest heartily as coming from my fellow-citizens so recently made such. I sincerely hope the time is not far distant when all that citizenship carries with it will be accorded to you throughout the land without any opposition. It is also a hope of mine that when it is accorded it will be exercised wisely and justly by you; and I have no lear that you will not exercise it as well as any other race which enjoys the privileges of our country. It is too much to expect perfection at first, but I have no fear that the franchise will not be exercised as carefully by our fellow-citizens of African descent as by others; and perhaps more care will be given, as it is about so recently given, and, therefore, prized more highly. To traveling through our country, and particularly through the Southern States, I have been glad to see the advances in education among the colored poole. It is rare to see a colored child miss an opportunity to get an education. Education is the first great step toward the capacity to exercise the now privileges accorded to you wisely and properly. As your speaker has said, I hope the field will be opened to you regardless of all prejudice.

The ex-President's remarks were received with great enthusiasm, and three hearty cheers were given as he left the stage.
